1 Plaintiffs Vishal Shah and Jayden Kim (“Plaintiffs”) respectfully submit this Opposition to 2 Defendant Fandom, Inc.’s (“Fandom” or “Defendant”) Motion for Leave to File a Motion for 3 Reconsideration Or, In the Alternative, Certifying the Motion to Dismiss Order for Interlocutory
 4 Appeal (ECF No. 38) (the “Motion” or “Mtn.”).

5 INTRODUCTION

6 On October 21, 2024, the Court issued an Order Denying Defendant’s Motion to Dismiss 7 (ECF No. 34) (the “Order”). The Order followed in the footsteps of two other federal courts deciding 8 similar issues, as well as the plain language of CIPA § 638.50 and the pronouncements of the 9 California Supreme Court and California Legislature to apply CIPA to protect Californians against 10 new technologies. Defendant now seeks reconsideration of the Order, or certification of the Order 11 for interlocutory appeal pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1292. On November 19, 2024, Court ordered that 12 Plaintiffs limit their response to whether the Order should be certified for interlocutory appeal. ECF 13 No. 42.

14 “[C]ertification of an order for interlocutory appeal is appropriate when such order 15 [i] involves a controlling question of law [ii] as to which there is substantial ground for difference of 16 opinion and [iii] that an immediate appeal from the order may materially advance the ultimate 17 termination of the litigation.” Sonoda v. Amerisave Mortg. Corp., 2011 WL 3957436, at *1 (N.D.
 18 Cal. Sept. 7, 2011) (internal quotations omitted). However, the “general rule is that an appellate 19 court should not review a district court ruling until after entry of a final judgment.” Id. (cleaned up).
 20 Even with “difficult rulings in hard cases,” interlocutory appeal “was not intended merely to provide 21 review of” those rulings. Nacarino v. Chobani, LLC, 2022 WL 833328, at *1 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 21, 22 2022). Accordingly, “Section 1292(b) certifications should be used sparingly and only in exceptional
 23 situations in which allowing an interlocutory appeal would avoid protracted and expensive 24 litigation.” Sonoda, 2011 WL 3957436, at *1 (cleaned up).

25 For the following reasons, Defendant cannot show any one of the aforementioned factors
 26 warrants certification of the Order for interlocutory appeal, much less that all three do. Accordingly, 27 the Order should not be certified for interlocutory appeal and the case should not be stayed.
 28

ARGUMENT

I. THERE IS NOT SUBSTANTIAL GROUND FOR DISAGREEMENT BECAUSE EVERY FEDERAL COURT HAS DECIDED THE ISSUES THE SAME WAY, AND OTHER DECISIONS ARE DISTINGUISHABLE

Defendant advocates that “[t]here are [] substantial grounds for a difference of opinion on the legal issues decided in the Court’s Order,” warranting interlocutory appeal. Mtn. at 7:18-19. That is incorrect. First, the only three federal courts to decide the issue of whether third-party online trackers are “pen registers” have all been decided the same way. Shah v. Fandom, Inc., --- F. Supp. 3d ---, 2024 WL 4539577, at *3-4 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 21, 2024); Moody v. C2 Educational Systems Inc., --- F. Supp. 3d ---, 2024 WL 3561367, at *2-3 (C.D. Cal. July 25, 2024); Greenley v. Kochava, Inc., 684 F. Supp. 3d 1024, 1050 (S.D. Cal. 2023). It is hard to see how there is “substantial disagreement,” let alone any disagreement, when all federal courts are in accord.<sup>1</sup>

Second, it is true that several state court decisions ruled differently. See Mtn. at 8:10-16 (citing cases). But “the existence of [a] district court case in some tension with [this Court’s] does not constitute a ‘substantial ground for difference of opinion’ to such an extent as to justify short-circuiting the normal appellate process.” Kellman v. Spokeo, Inc., 2022 WL 2965399, at *2 (N.D. Cal. July 8, 2022); see also Spears v. Washington Mut. Bank FA, 2010 WL 54755, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 8, 2010) (“[T]he mere fact that one district court came to a different conclusion on the same issue is insufficient to establish a substantial ground for difference of opinion.”); Couch v. Telescope Inc., 611 F.3d 629, 633 (9th Cir. 2010) (“[J]ust because counsel contends that one precedent rather than another is controlling does not mean there is such a substantial difference of opinion as will support an interlocutory appeal.”) (cleaned up).

Regardless, there are several problems with Defendant's position. As an initial matter, all three state court rulings are unpublished decisions by California state trial courts, which are not citable in California state courts and have no precedential value. See Cal. R. Ct. 8.1115(a) ("[A]n opinion of a California Court of Appeal or superior court appellate division that is not certified for publication or ordered published must not be cited or relied on by a court or a party in any other

<sup>1</sup> A federal court in Hughes v. Vivint, Inc., Case No. 2:24-cv-03081, ECF No. 23 (C.D. Cal. July 12, 2024), did not decide this issue because the plaintiff did not allege the privacy harm actually happened to her. Id. at 6-8.

1 action.”). In fact, citing an unpublished case in California courts, unless the opinion meets a narrow
 2 set of criteria not applicable here, can be sanctionable. See, e.g., Alicia T. v. Cnty. of Los Angeles,
 3 222 Cal. App. 3d 869, 885 (1990), modified (Aug. 16, 1990) (sanctions imposed where, among other 4 misconduct, “the T. family’s counsel cited the unpublished case eight times in the reply brief and 5 discussed it for four pages.”). Accordingly, uncitable decisions should not form the basis for 6 “substantial disagreement.”

7 Moreover, as Plaintiffs explained in their Opposition to the Motion to Dismiss (ECF No. 21 8 at 3-4), the state court cases involved plaintiffs who asserted claims directly against websites for 9 their collection of IP addresses, as opposed to the third party’s collection, which this Court
 10 distinguished. See Shah, 2024 WL 4539577, at *5 (“A user who consents to disclose their IP address
 11 to Fandom as part of accessing its website does not necessarily consent to disclose their IP address
 12 to the third parties operating the Trackers.”); see also id., at *5 n.3 (“The cases on which [Defendant] 13 rel[ies] involve situations where users were directly communicating with the party alleged to be 14 operating the pen register and voluntarily sent that party their IP address.”); Hedley Decl. Ex. 2 ¶ 52 15 (“Upon installing the PR/TT on its Website, Defendant uses the PR/TT to collect the IP address of 16 visitors to the Website.”) (emphasis added); Hedley Decl. Ex. 3 ¶ 52 (same).<sup>2</sup>

17 The state court decisions, unlike the federal court decisions, also all appeared to ignore the 18 text of the statute, which controls as this Court recognized. Compare Shah, 2024 WL 4539577, at 19 *3 (“[T]he Court’s analysis must begin with the statutory text, and if that text is clear, must end 20 there.”); and Corner Post, Inc. v. Bd. of Governors of Fed. Rsr. Sys., --- U.S. ---, 144 S. Ct. 2440, 21 2454 (2024) (“As this Court has repeatedly stated, the text of a law controls over purported legislative 22 intentions unmoored from any statutory text.”) (cleaned up); with Hedley Decl. Ex. 1 at 3 (no mention 23 of statutory text); and ECF No. 31 at 4-5 (same). Thus, none of the state court decisions present

25
 26 <sup>2</sup> It does appear that counsel in Palacios and Rodriguez shamelessly copied many of Plaintiffs’
 27 factual allegations verbatim, as both Palacios and Rodriguez were filed after Plaintiffs’ lawsuit.
 28 Notwithstanding this, counsel in Rodriguez and Palacios was unable to allege a third party collected an IP address, as opposed to the website-defendant. Further, Defendant is not in danger of inconsistent rulings because Ms. Palacios is an absent class member in Plaintiffs’ case here, so she will be covered by the Court’s ultimate disposition of this matter.

1 grounds for “substantial disagreement” because all either analyzed claims against websites for their 2 own collection of IP addresses, and/or ignored the controlling text of the statute.

3       Finally, the Court’s Order is bolstered by the fact that the Ninth Circuit and California district
 4 courts have repeatedly applied CIPA to internet communications in all manner of contexts. See, e.g., 5 Javier v. Assurance IQ, LLC, 2022 WL 1744107, at *1 (9th Cir. May 31, 2022) (“Though written in 6 terms of wiretapping, Section 631(a) applies to Internet communications.”); Yockey v. Salesforce, 7 Inc., --- F. Supp. 3d ---, 2024 WL 3875785, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 16, 2024) (“The Court agrees with 8 those Ninth Circuit district court decisions that have found that software qualifies as a device under 9 [CIPA] Section 632.”). This follows “the California Supreme Court’s pronouncements regarding 10 the broad legislative intent underlying CIPA to protect privacy, and the California courts’ approach
 11 to updating obsolete statutes in light of emerging technologies.” In re Google Inc., 2013 WL 12 5423918, at *21 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 26, 2013); see also Yockey, 2024 WL 3875785, at *7 (“[T]he 13 Legislature itself evinced a desire that the CIPA’s statutory protections should extend across the 14 developing field of technology.”). Thus, reinforcing the lack of a “substantial disagreement” is the 15 California Supreme Court’s mandate that courts construe CIPA to apply to new technologies. This 16 Court, other federal district courts, and the Ninth Circuit have all obliged. Defendant’s citation to 17 three state court decisions that ignored such controlling precedent is of no import.<sup>3</sup>

18       II. AN INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL WILL ONLY UNNECESSARILY DELAY THE 19 LITIGATION, NOT MATERIALLY ADVANCE ITS ULTIMATE TERMINATION

20       Defendant does not address this factor in its Motion and thereby waived it. Wilridge v.
 21 Marshall, 2014 WL 1217974, at *3 n.4 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 21, 2014) (“Generally, a court need not 22 consider new issues raised for the first time in a reply brief.”). Regardless, the Court should consider 23 that Defendant “will have the opportunity to appeal” after trial and that “[t]he additional burden of 24 ... having to complete trial before taking the appeal is not substantial.” Stuart v. Radioshack Corp., 25 2009 WL 1817007, at *4 (N.D. Cal. June 25, 2009). “On the other hand, permitting the interlocutory 26 appeal will ... potentially postpone [a] trial for many months, thus materially prejudicing the 27 Plaintiffs and disrupting the Court’s calendar.” Id. Accordingly, this factor is not met.

28       <sup>3</sup> People v. Blair, 25 Cal. 3d 640 (1979), does not change this, as that decision was issued before the Internet even existed.

1           III. EVEN IF THERE IS A CONTROLLING QUESTION, ALLOWING DISCOVERY
2           TO PROCEED WILL BETTER INFORM THE RECORD

3           Defendant argues that “legal questions about the scope of the pen register statute are 4           controlling and dispositive.” Mtn. at 7:16-17. Assuming arguendo Defendant is correct, allowing 5           discovery to proceed and re-evaluating the need for appellate review better serves judicial economy.

6           James v. Walt Disney Co., 2024 WL 664811 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 16, 2024), is instructive. There, 7           the defendant sought interlocutory appeal of an order denying a motion to dismiss that found the 8           plaintiffs had alleged an injury in fact sufficient for Article III standing. Id., at *1. Although whether 9           the plaintiffs had suffered an injury was a threshold legal question, the court found that “the ultimate 10          question of Article III jurisdiction may turn on a full assessment of the facts, including precisely
11          what information is collected and what is done with the information.” Id. Accordingly, the court 12          denied the motion for interlocutory appeal without prejudice, finding “the outcome of the litigation 13          would be more materially advanced if the court were to establish the full set of relevant facts on 14          which to base the determination whether there is sufficient Article III injury, especially if that 15          determination is fact intensive.” Id., at *3.

16          So too here. Discovery into the mechanics of the Trackers and how IP addresses are collected 17          will better inform any appellate assessment of whether the Trackers qualify as “pen registers” under 18          Cal. Penal Code § 638.50. Similarly, Defendant argued at the motion to dismiss hearing that 19          “Plaintiffs had not established an injury under Section 637.2 because Plaintiffs had no privacy 20          interest in their IP addresses.” Shah, 2024 WL 4539577, at *5. Discovery regarding “whether 21          information is simply collected or instead collected and disclosed, or how information is used, might 22          also factor into the privacy calculus.” James, 2024 WL 664811, at *3. Thus, allowing discovery to 23          proceed will better inform the record and crystalize the issues for any interlocutory appeal. In the 24          interim, because “complete facts are in need of development, certification under § 1292(b) is not 25          appropriate.” Id., at *2.

26           CONCLUSION

27           For the foregoing reasons, the Court should deny Defendant’s Motion.
